which he declared is the greatest city in the world.

"It is a city in which every American citizen should manifest the greatest interest, no matter what section of the country he comes from. This city should be a matter of pride and personal interest with every American."

The senator spoke of the importance of the individual in the government of this country. He declared that if the country is not managed properly the fault lies with the individual. He spoke of the importance of public sentiment, which, he declared, rules the land. Sentiment, he said, is stronger than all the armies of the world.

Senator Vardaman concluded his remarks by impressing upon the members of the banking institute the necessity of proper living and warned them against the intemperate use of alcoholic liquors.

Officers of Banquet. The address of welcome was made by B. Devereux, and Robert N. Harper, honorary member of Washington acted as toastmaster. As the sults of the efforts of a banquet comittee, headed by A. S. Carter as chair-W. McK. Stowell, vice chairman

"Nick" Altrock of the Washington base ball club and "Pork Chops" Evers presented a vaudeville act based on the great American game, which was loudly applauded. Charles Trowbridge Tittman sang several solos, and Arthur Butler Piece recited several dialect selections. Edwin Callow, often known as Tony Callio, also recited.

The latest tango and other dance steps were demonstrated by an attractive young woman and a dancing partner whose names were not announced. The menus were in the form of a bond, the coupons of which called for the various courses.

COUNT MIELZYNSKI FREED.

Charged With Killing His Wife and Her Nephew.

MESERITZ, Germany, February 21.— Count Matthias Brudzewo Milezynski, the Polish aristocrat and member of the German imperial parliament, was acquitted today of the charge of manslaughter of his wife and her nephew, Count Alfred Miacsinski.

The tragedy occurred December 20 last at Dakowy. Mokrs, the country seat of the countess near Graetz, and attracted wide attention on account of the social prominence of those concerned.

The count shot both his wife and her nephew dead on finding them together at 4 o'clock in the morning in the countess' apartments. After the shooting the count yoluntarily waived his parliamentary immunity in order to permit his trial to take place.

FLAYS REDFIELD

Mr. Humphrey Attacks His Statement Regarding Industrial Conditions.

EFFECT OF NEW TARIFF ON BUSINESS INTERESTS

Hot Debate in Which "Soup Houses" and "Bread Lines" Figure Prominently.

Secretary Redfield of the Department Commerce had his reputation as an investigator of industrial condition knocked about generally in the House of Representatives yesterday by republicans, principally Representative Humphrey of Washing ton, so that Democratic Leader Under had to rush to the defense of his one-time colleague.

that the democratic tariff has put the big shingle industry in his state out of business, declared that Secretary Redfield had sent a "couple of two-by-four ing, and that after they had made a reto the House which are absolutely at variance with the findings. The explosion came while members in committee of the whole house were talking about a paragraph in the urgent deficiency appropriation bill providing an extra $50,000 for the industrial relations commission which recently undertook to find out why there is so much talk about industrial unrest and men out of work. "Men out of work" starts the republicans going like bulls at red rags, just as a mention of states' rights arouses the solid southern delegation to

Representative Mann told his political the democrats ignored the bread lines, and he read from letters which state that Buffalo charity organizations report their "halls full of hungry, discouraged men and women looking for work." The United Charities organization of Chi-cago, he said, "show an almost unprec-edented depression in business circles." Representative Mann also read the re-cent bulletin of the industrial relations committee, which has been published. committee, which has been published, and which could easily be taken to show real hard times everywhere.

This annoyed Representative Garner, the democrat who has been "kidded" ative Mann contributed the information that recently idle men in Indiana fought like tigers for the right to get jobs on ice cutting. Representative Humphrey cited 20,000 idle men in Boston, and said the general steel and iron industry of the country had been cut in half, all because of democratic tariff reductions. Afterlistening to the array of soup houses for ten minutes Representative Barnhart, democrat of Indiana, ventured the assertion that the soup houses and charitable organizations were faked up by the republicans to give the country the dismal semblance of a calamity-stricken nation.

All this was at top speed, until the at sentative Underwood to make a few remarks. He said that one reason for a Underwood, referring to the effort to exclude the letter.

"Didn't the gentleman from Alabama refuse to yield to me once when he was talking about the iron and steel industry, when I wanted to ask whether he knew of three steel mills in his own city of Birmingham that had closed?" retorted Representative Humphrey, who repeated that he had a copy of the report which had been made to Secretary Redfield by the "cheap two-by-four detectives," and that if it were read into the Record it would absolutely disprove everything Secretary Redfield had written to the effect that the shingle mills of Washington have closed for perfectly natural reasons, and that the tariff has nothing to do with it.

Underwood Jumps to Defense. Finally the Redfield letter was read salamed of the Redfield letter. Up jumped Representative Underwood.

"I will not allow to go unassailed that the Secretary of Commerce has falsified himself."

"The gentleman from Alabama does not know what he is talking about," returned Mr. Humphrey. "I make the statement now that the evidence contradicts every material statement in that letter."

"Well, put it in the Record," roared Representative Fitzgerald of New York. Mr. Humphrey wouldn't do it and Representative Underwood undertook to telephone to the Department of Commerce for the evidence, promising to see to it that it is printed.

Earlier in the debate Representative Humphrey, who is getting to be the record calamity artist of the House, dipped his brush into the pot of somber tint that he carries with him and paid further respects to the Secretary of Commerce.

"He submitted to the House the other strike conditions here today when it de-veloped that four witnesses, ordered held "but he gave the entire years of 1912 and room incommunicado until they 1913. I want to show the effect since the

The ball opened at 8 o'clock and closed at midnight, and during the intervening time the young and old Pythians of the country, with their vives, sweethearts, sisters and nothers, showed a warm appreciation mothers, showed a warm appreciation of the alluring dance music that suggested the latter day dances rather than the lancers, quadrilles and walties of other days. The hall was resplendent with the national colors, draped and festooned, intertwined with graceful vines of green. The costumes of the women also added to the color effect, but the faces of the participants told plainly that there was no room for admiration of anything but the dancing, and the big floor of the ballroom was filled until the stroke of 12. A few minutes later the lights went out and the jubilee in its every phase was at an end.

Ourand, commanding the 1st Regiment, N. G. D. C., retired, also a former commander of the veteran organization, spoke. Several members were called upon for reminiscences of their service with the Corcoran Cadets. A feature of the evening which brought forth encores from the banqueters was the singing of several solos by Miss Marie Stone, a Washington girl. Her singing "And Then" was particularly pleasing. She was presented with a large bouquet of carnations by Maj. Edwards. C. Eugene Edwards, N. G. D. C.

Traces Evolution of Corps

During the early part of the evening menu the guests, decorated in their varicolored hats, exchanged camp tales, stopping now and then to take advantage of the bits of humor which flew thick and fast around the tables. Maj. Edwards opened the speaking program tracing the evolution of the Corcoran Cadets from the West Washington Zouaves up from the West Washington Zouaves up to their merger with the organized militia of the District of Columbia, and then on right up to last night, which was the thirtieth anniversary of the organization of the command,

Hope for the success of the veteran organization was expressed by Maj. Edwards, who also told these present that in addition to keeping up their own interests in matters military, they should try to instill into the hearts and minds of the young America the need for military training.

He insisted that it would be to the interests of the patent office and of the general public if the entire receipts of the office were expended upon the administration of this office. He showed that a surplus of these patent receipts of some $10,000,000 had been rolled up and covered into the United States Treasury. This really amounted to a tax upon the American people, he said.

Mr. Ewing said that the severest criticism of the patent system grew out cism of the patent system grew out been pending for the last fifteen years and were still in the course of litiga-"Let's get rid of these cases and prevent such delays in the future," urged Mr. Ewing, "and we will have done much to remove the criticism of

A new building for the patent office, or at least all of the present building now occupied in part by the office, was greatly needed, he said. The present quarters are entirely inadequate. He said that some 50,000,000 copies of patents are at present stowed around the building, in constant danger of destruction by fire. All this stowed around the building, in danger of destruction by fire, should be rectified through gen-propriation by Congress, he said Representative Martin A. marks. He said that one reason for a large number of idle men is because the steamship companies are bringing in immigrants at $5 apiece because of a steamship rate war.

And then the House fell into one of the biggest muddles it has ever encountered. It was because Mr. Underwood wanted to have read the reply of Secretary Redfield to the Humphrey charges that the state of Washington was suffering because of democratic tariff and that 194 shingle mills had closed because of the Canadian competition at unfair rates. From five to ten members were talking at once, all the time, the republicans trying to keep the letter from being read.

"It is an unfair thing to do," said Mr. Underwood, referring to the effort to exclude the letter.

veloped that four witnesses, ordered held in a room incommunicado until they could testify, had strangely increased to five.

Representative Evans of Montana first made the discovery that there was an extra witness. He immediately summoned the sergeant-at-arms. This official declared there were five witnesses turned over to him.

"Well, we only gave four into your custody," declared the representative. "Who's refer the stranger?"

Frank E. Cove, attorney for one of the companies, then told the committee the fifth man was a witness for the mine owners.

"I have fullest confidence in the integrity of Mr. Cove," said E. P. Costigan of counsel for the miners, "but I submit that this is an astounding situation when the committee's own witnesses are held in a room with a witness for the operators."

Representative Humphrey gave a huge string of similar figures illustrating the United States trade with nearly every country in the world. He said that in heavy instance the Underwood tariff.
